

CHINGFORD'S GOT TALENT 2012

The Greene Man pub is bringing the hottest talent contest to town by hosting 'Has Chingford Got Talent?' for third time.

The competition will take place every Saturday from 18th February throughout that month until the grand finale on Saturday 24th March with a winner's prize of £250 up for grabs plus some great goodies.

The nights will be held in aid of Whipps Cross University Hospitals Big Push Appeal which aims to raise £350,000 for equipment and improvements in the maternity department.

The increasingly busy unit delivered 5,200 babies last year and the aging estate means that it is in need of upgrading.

More than 5,000 families will use the Whipps Cross maternity services this year - that's 100 families a week who would benefit from the improved spaces and state of the art equipment that The Big Push will fund.

Dominic Pisarek, Greene Man pub landlord, said: "The competition is open to anyone over the age of five and is limited to groups of no more than six people.

"The entry fee is £5 per act and there will even be a music agent looking for new talent present at final – this could be your lucky break!

"If you sing, dance or maybe you are a comedian- pop in, register and take to the stage. There are no judges- just audience vote."

"We hope our regular customers and locals really get into the spirit of the competition and help to raise as much money as we can for the Big Push. This is an event for all the family so you can all come along to watch and join the fun!"

So if you fancy yourself as a bit of a comedian or can sing and dance, whatever talent you think you have and are brave enough to prove it, why not send your application form in now!
